

Macropsychology Lab
of the Institute of Psychology of the Polish Academy of Sciences

announces opening of

Post-Doc position

in the project that investigates how lay people conceptualize societal development, with particular attention to distinguishing modernization from Westernization.

For more on project's research area, please check this special section, and this and this paper (in case of problems with free access, please contact principal investigator [PI] - Kuba Kryś - whose profile can be found here).

OUTLINE OF CONDITIONS:

	Post-Doc position
Number of positions:	One or two positions.
Period:	Up till the end of November 2026 (6-12 months each).
Scope of responsibilities:	Addressing research questions on lay perceptions of societal development using the available macro-psychological dataset from 70 countries (as well as other datasets), and preparing first-authored manuscripts based on these analyses.
Financial conditions:	120 000 Polish zł./yearly "brutto brutto", i.e., with all costs of employer (Please note that it is difficult to provide a precise "brutto" or "netto" amount over the long term due to fluctuations in the Polish taxation system. At present, the net salary received by the employee is slightly above 60% of the "brutto brutto" amount. We hope for your understanding.)
Additional provisions:	Post-Doc can be offered: conference participation budget, and a separate budget for in-depth research (to be determined based on the proposed research).
Time involvement:	Full time, but we remain open to other solutions (1/2 or 3/4) if a candidate needs it.
Location:	We expect the Post-Doc to reside in Poland during the contract period. If the selected candidate is based abroad, a transition period of up to approximately two months can be accommodated, during which the Post-Doc may carry out their regular tasks remotely before relocating to Poland. In-person presence in Warsaw is required for lab seminars (approximately every second week). Most other tasks can be performed remotely, making it possible for the Post-Doc to reside in another city in Poland outside of Warsaw.

PROFILE OF A CANDIDATE:

	Post-Doc position
Profile of a candidate:	Formal requirements: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. PhD degree obtained after January 1st 2019 (in exceptional cases [sick leave; maternal leave] this period can be extended - for details please see the grantgiver [i.e., NCN] regulations). 2. First-authored publications in journal(s) from the JCR list; candidates who obtained their PhD closer to 2019 should have more impressive publication record. Please note that the field of previous specialization is not specified – candidates from all disciplines (e.g., economics, sociology) will be considered. Basic expected skills and characteristics: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Self-reliance and strong work ethic.

	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 2. Interest in societal development research and openness to crossing disciplinary boundaries (the project is postdisciplinary). 3. Statistical skills sufficient for analyzing multi-country data (MLM), either already acquired or with a readiness to learn them during the first months of the contract. The position is relatively short due to the timeframe of the grant. Given that the review process typically takes time, we also expect candidates to be prepared to successfully complete the review and publication process of all their first-authored manuscripts prepared during the Post-Doc position, even after the formal collaboration concludes.
